ABSTRACT

Eleven sections compose this comprehensive and exhaustive bibliography on the black family in urban areas. It is primarily designed as a reference for those who wish to learn more about the life of blacks in urban areas. The sections are selected black periodicals, selected general reference works, United States libraries with major black history book collections, government documents, reports and pamphlets, doctoral dissertations on the black family, black population by states, 50 cities with the largest black population, black newspapers in urban areas, books, and articles. This work deals with the following urban areas: New York City, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, Newark, Detroit, and San Francisco. Moreover, this bibliography deals not only with the mother and father in the family but their relationships with their children. (Author/AM)

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography was first written in 1973 and yet, to my knowledge, it is still the most comprehensive and exhaustive ever compiled on The Black Family in Urban Areas. It is primarily designed as a reference for those who wish to learn more about the life of Blacks in urban areas. This work deals mainly with the following urban areas: New York City, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, Newark, Detroit and San Francisco. Moreover, this bibliography deals not only with the mother and father in the family but their relationships with their children.

Because of the current interest in the Black Family and particularly in urban centers, obviously there is a need for a bibliography of this nature. The Classic work on the Black Family is E. Franklin Frazier's The Negro Family in the United States. This book was written in 1939 and many of the arguments by Frazier are now given different interpretations. The current standard work on the Black Family is Andrew Billingsley's Black Families in White America. There are other recent works that attempt to give different interpretations to the role and influence of the Black Family: Robert B. Hill, The Strengths of Black Families; John H. Scanzoni, The Black Family in Modern Society; Robert Staples, ed., The Black Family: Essay and Studies, The Black Woman in America: Sex, Marriage and the Family, and Charles V. Willie, The Family Life of Black People. Many of these works have extensive bibliographies. Because of current proliferation of materials on the Black Family the researcher will have to consult them if he is interested in up-to-date information.

In this work I have included a number of references and sources including: "Government Documents," "Black Population by States," "50 Cities With the Largest Black Population," "Urban and Rural Population by Race and Sex," "Household and Family Characteristics of Blacks, by Regions," "Doctoral Dissertations on the Black Family," "Black Newspapers in Urban Areas," "Articles," and "Books." All of these references should help us better understand Black people in urban centers, as well as the Black Family in urban areas.

Obviously, any work of this endeavor encompassed the assistance of many people and many hours. Therefore, it would be nearly impossible to name all persons that assisted in this monumental work, however, I must express special acknowledgement to the following: the secretaries, Penny Martin, Judie Strain, Yolanda Robinson, Sylvia Noel and Pat Myles of the Department of Black Studies at The Ohio State University, and the Ohio State Universities Libraries. Without their assistance this work would not have been completed. I take full responsibility, however, for all errors. I also welcome any corrections of errors or omissions.
